Gustavo Nazareno How to Grow a Flower from a Supernova

26 JUNE - 15 JULY, 2026

PARIS, March 2026—Opera Gallery in Paris is pleased to present ‘How to Grow a Flower from a Supernova’, a solo exhibition of new paintings and charcoal drawings by Brazilian artist Gustavo Nazareno. On view from 26 June to 15 July 2026, the exhibition introduces a new body of work in which spiritual heritage, couture and celestial references intersect.

Nazareno’s practice brings together diverse inspirations: the cosmology and rituals of Afro-Latin religions, the formal clarity of Irving Penn’s fashion photography, the theatrical structure of clothings created by fashion designers like Alexander McQueen or John Galiano, and the opulence and richness of Renaissance and Baroque art. Across painting and charcoal, he combines devotional imagery with the discipline and construction of couture.

Referencing fables inspired by the pantheon of Orixás—a system of deities venerated in parts of Africa and Latin America—the series functions as an offering to Pombagira, a feminine entity within Candomblé, a religion Nazareno practices. Associated with beauty, seduction, autonomy and power, Pombagira serves as both subject and framework. “Pombagira moves between worlds with confidence and commands attention through presence and aesthetics,” Nazareno notes. “She understands the body as language and adornment as power. In my work, she represents a fusion of spirituality, performance and beauty.”

“Presented during Couture Week in Paris (7–10 July 2026), ‘How to Grow a Flower from a Supernova’ positions fashion as a symbolic and structural language. Here, Nazareno extends the visual vocabulary he developed through Renaissance painting and fashion imagery into a broader cosmological framework. Furthermore, he examines clothing as narrative—how garments shape identity, and how dress communicates without words,” says Marion Petitdidier, Director of Opera Gallery Paris.

The series also reflects the artist’s evolving exploration of astrophysics, marked by a distinct shift in lighting, atmosphere, composition, and background. In this new body of work, Nazareno situates his figures against the backdrop of an imagined planet of his own creation—complete with its own weather, light, shadows, and inhabitants—using this environment to introduce a new silhouette for his painted forms that incorporates a range of earthly elements.
